A LONGER SPAN OF LIFE.

The fact that people of the present day live more complete live than did our ancestors is apparen to all of as. Hy this is meant that we appear, at least, in crowd into the given space of the 24 hours at lotted to us us a day, increased ac complishment that was not possible In the day when modern invention had falled to reach its immentious development of the present. That is addition to this we are also living longer fives is evidenced by the statistics recently coleaned by the American Red Pross showing the longerity of the modern over the ancient

According to the facts presented with the wonderful advancemen that has been made along- health lines in the past centuries; our allotted span of life is increasing to such an extent that we may safe live to be 100 years of age by the time the year 2074 is reached. No that any of us living today will have the opportunity of taking advantag of this new lease on life, but the opportunity will be given to the generations to come to enjoy the added years provided that health conditions show the same natural improvement that they have in the past centuries,

In the year 1910 people of New York city were dying at the average of 35 years of age. Ten years later in 1920, the average age for deaths in the same community had been advanced to 39 years. For many years the upward trend of life has been noticed and the available statistics
